

T.J.: This is the truth. God's truth. We all have those feelings. Everybody. It's called temptation. It's the same as the alcoholic being tempted to drink. As the kleptomaniac being tempted to steal. Pathological liars. Same deal. Everybody's tempted, okay? It's our cross to bear. It's God's way of testing us. Of seeing how strong we are. How much we really love him. You deal.

You pray. You push it away. You get rid of the feelings. God can take them away. I'm living proof. I am living my life for the Lord, leading a normal life with a woman, the way God intended - and I am happy. Yes, I was tempted. Sure, I gave into temptation. But no more because I chose not to live in sin, not to commit unnatural acts that are an abomination to God. I asked for forgiveness and by the grace of God, I am forgiven. And I am happy. You ever seen a happy queer? Oh yeah, that's a great life. Ironic too. They took a good word: "gay". Once meant "happy". Now it means something else. Something evil and wrong. The other day I was watching the news, and there they were, marching in a Gay Pride Parade right here in Dallas out on Cedar Springs. Guys half-dressed, with nipple rings - which I don't get. Some barely wearing clothes. Hugging and kissing on each other. This (indicates with his fingers.) close to having sex right on the street. And of course there were the drag queens, prancing around like a bunch of ugly Miss America contestants. Twirlin' and throwin' their batons in the air. I'm sure Benny was there somewhere. Dykes on bikes. Freak show! It was so disgusting. Most of them drunk out of their minds or hyped up on dope or something. Oh yeah, be proud of that! Be oh, so proud! (Pause, sincere.) Better yet, realize your wicked evil ways and repent, folks. Because there is one answer. One way. And his name is Jesus Christ. (Points to someone in the audience.) He loves you.

(Looks at MARK.) And I love you. And that's the truth.

And "The truth shall set you free." John 8:32. If you ask in prayer, there is nothing ... nothing he can't do.
